

Education Programs

Fall 2007-Spring 2008

Distance Learning

The Independence Park Institute at Independence National Historical Park offers several ways to explore the park without ever leaving your classroom.

Electronic Field Trip

Freedom in America: Some Assembly Required aired on PBS stations across the country on October 17, 2006.

To watch please visit:

<http://edcommunity.apple.com/ali/story.php?itemID=824>

This electronic field trip to Independence NHP was made possible through a partnership between the National Park Foundation, the National Park Service, and Ball State University.

Daily Life and Diversity in 18th Century Philadelphia Web-based program

Students each take on the role of a person living in 1790s Philadelphia, and then investigate that person's life through the activities on the website. Students explore web content about their families, their houses, and their daily lives. Larger issues of the 1790s such as the yellow fever epidemic and Philadelphia as the nation's capital city are also explored. Lessons and web components can be found at www.independenceparkinstitute.com.

Professional Development for Teachers

Are you looking for professional development opportunities that offer both subject matter content and practical classroom application? If so, professional development at Independence National Historical Park may be just what you are looking for!

The Independence Park Institute (IPI) at Independence NHP offers a wide range of professional development opportunities.

Teaching American History Grants (TAH)

The IPI will work with school districts applying for Teaching American History Grants and provide them with full day or half day professional development programs as well as assistance in planning their trip to Historic Philadelphia and Independence NHP. More information and sample schedules for these programs can be found at www.independenceparkinstitute.com.

Summer Institutes for Teachers

Each summer the IPI offers a week long summer institute for teachers. The theme changes annually so there is always something new to learn. Applications become available in January and are due in March.

Upcoming Topics

2007: The Liberty Bell

2008: Archeology

2009: American Revolution

Special Topic Full and Half Day Workshops

Throughout the year the IPI offers themed workshops and behind-the-scenes tours for educators. Upcoming topics include: A Curator's Look into 18th Century Life, the Revolutionary War, and From Paper to the Press. To find out about upcoming workshops please call 215-597-2760.

Here is what one participant had to say about A Curator's Look into 18th Century Life, a professional development workshop that took place March 3, 2007. "...a very worthwhile experience! The presenters were very knowledgeable and eager to share their work with us. I truly enjoyed this 'behind the scenes' look at 18th century life."

Interactive Standards-Based Education Programs

Archeology: History Found in Pieces ~ Grades 5-12

How do we learn from what others left behind? What will others learn from us in the future?

Students get to take on the role of archeologists and piece together the stories of the buried past. They get hands-on experience from replica artifacts and then have the opportunity to see and talk with real archeologists at work processing artifacts from the dig at the National Constitution Center.

Benjamin Franklin in Philadelphia ~ Grades K-12

Franklin was determined to use his intelligence and ability to make his world a better place. How can you use your talents to make a positive contribution to your community?

After learning Benjamin Franklin's many contributions to Philadelphia and the new nation with the help of pre-visit lessons, classes use their time in the learning lab to explore more of Franklin's life and work through hands-on activities like playing a glass armonica, setting type for a printing press, and experimenting with electricity.

Daily Life and Diversity in 18th Century Philadelphia ~ Grades 5-8

How do we know what life was like in the 18th century, and how is it similar or different to your life today?

Before their field trip to the park, students use web-based activities to learn about daily life in four households in 1790s Philadelphia. During their site visit, classes use their time in the learning labs to become historians. They examine documents, objects, and images in order to learn about life in the past.

18th Century House Tour ~ Grades 5-8

Would you like your class to go more in-depth into 18th century life? Book a one-hour tour of the Todd and Bishop White Homes to go with your program! In this tour, a ranger will lead you and your class through these two homes and discuss what it would have been like to live there.

Quest for Freedom: Slavery and the Underground Railroad in Philadelphia ~ Grades 7-12

What do you think are the most important lessons learned from the stories and leaders of the Underground Railroad and how can you apply them in your life?

Pre-visit lessons and activities provide important background knowledge about African cultures, the Atlantic slave trade, abolitionists, and the Underground Railroad. During their site visit, classes explore related stories and resources of Independence NHP that focus on Philadelphia's connections and significant contributions to anti-slavery efforts in the 18th and 19th centuries.
